Change of CEO at Xergi A/S

As from 1 September 2009 Xergi A/S will carry through structural changes within the management board. Sales and marketing director, Jørgen Ballermann, takes over the responsibility as CEO, and former CEO Frank Rosager will continue in the position as director for projects and technology (CTO).

This change will allow Xergi to strengthen its efforts on internationalisation as well as developing the company's technology platform. The change will also strengthen the company's position in making it better equipped to handle the growing portfolio of international biogas projects, which are expected to be installed in the coming years.

Frank Rosager has many years of experience within design, delivery, operation and maintenance of turnkey energy projects around the world, an exceptional basis for management of the company's projects and technology development. "The new CEO, Jørgen Ballermann, who has extensive commercial experience with international projects within the wind and biogas businesses, will in the future be at the head of the commercial development of the company", says Chairman of the Board, Jens Bjerg Sørensen.
